A Baby and a Bear.

Henry Flynn, who resides up the hills near laskip, is in town to-day, and has near Inskip, is in town to-day, and has the following meident to relate, in which a bear of the cinnamon species abducted his three year-old daughter, not with any desire to harm the child, but through a strange kind of affection it appears that Mr. Flynn started one morning to take a horse to pasture, and, as his little girl seemed anxious to go, he put her upon the horse's back and 'et her ride a short distance, perhaps totty tods from the house, where he put her down and told her to run home. her down and told her to run home. He noticed that she continued standing where he left her, and, on looking back after going a little farther, saw her playing in the said. He soon passed out of sight and was gone about an hour, expecting, of course, that the child would return to the house after playing a few moments. On returning thid would return to the house after playing a few moments. On returning home he made inquiry about het of its mother, who said she had not seen het, and supposed he had taking her along with him. On going to the spot where he had left her he saw huge hear tracks in the sand and at once came to the cardiacion that the child had been carried with the the heat. i ed off by the bear the tannly immediately made search the family immediately made search through the forest, which was grown up to thuost a jungle rendering their son hyery slow. All day these anxious patents searched for traces of their child not did they stop when darkness can on but remained in the woods calling the lost one by her name. Morning tame, and their search was fruitcalling the lost one by hername. Morning came, and then search was fruitless. A couple of gentlemen from below who are traveling through the mountains buying stock came to the house, and being into med of the curcumstances immediately set out to find her. The gentlemen wandered about, and as they were passing a swamp spot where the undergrowth was there called the clidd, or else they were talking loud, when one of them heard her voice. He then called her by name and told her to come out of the bushes. She replied that the bear would not let her.

United a marcis is prepared to see the purpose of the Yellowstone National Park defeated, it will give heed to what Gen. Sheridan says about it in his report to the war department. It seems that the park is "rented out to private parties." Of course they are using it for money making purposes; and not only, as Gen. Sheridan says, is it probable that relaims and conditions will arise that may to hard for the government arel the courty to shake off," but such a present disposition of the place will impair, if it does not wholly destroy, its character in the future as a unique popular possession. For example, me of its features should be that of a great game preserve. It appears that since its discovery as many as $4,000 elk have been "killed by skininnters" in the park, and that durng lot winter alone as many as 2, Out were slaughtered, besides mountain-sheep, deer, and other animals. At this rate how long will there be any game left to preserve! General Sheridan recommends that the park be extended in an easterly direction about forty miles, so as to add 3,344 is equal in all respects to the best in the square miles to its area, and "make a | city and almost unbroken. preserve for the large game of the west, now so rapidly decreasing.' This recommendation is a good one, as well as the further suggestions that "the improvements in the park should be national," and controlled by the government, and that "small appropriations be made and expended each year on roads and trails," etc. He says that a small body of troops will "keep out the skin hunters and all other hunters," and make the park a safe resort for the game now drifting toward it. This is manifestly the easiest way to police

Houses Built of Cotton.

Of all substances apparently the least likely to be used in the construction of a fire proof building. cotton would, perhaps, take the first rank and paper the second, and yet both these materials are actually being employed for the purpose indicated, and their use will probably taken, ston at because thinos, extend. Compressed paper pulp is successfully used in the manufacture of doors, wall panelings, and for oth er similar purposes, with the result that all risk of warping and cracking is obviated, while increased lightness is attained and the fear of dry rot is of deal of work for the short sess forever banished. Papier mache, af can and it is to be hoped that it ter having served a useful purpose in an unobtrusive manner for years as a material for small trays, paper knives and other light articles, has

position in the industrial world.

A still more sudden and striking spassenger train was thrown down advance has been made in the emembankment thirty feet, and ployment of cotton as a building material. A preparation called cellu loid, in which cotton is a leading in gredient, has been used lately as substitute for ivory in the manufacture of such articles as billiard balls and paper cutters, and now a Canad ian manufacturer has invented process by which compressed cotton may be used, not only for doors and window frames but for the whole facade of large buildings. The encrmous and increasing demand for paper for its legitimate uses as a print ing and writing material prevents the extended use of the papier mache as a building material, for which it is so well suited in many ways; but the production of cotton is practically unlimited, and there seems to be a large field available for its use in its new capacity as a substitute for bricks-or at least plaster chemicals and compressed, it can be made perfectly fire-proof and ashard as stone, absolutely air and damp proof; and a material is thus produced admirably adapted for the lining -internal or external - of the buildings of which the shell may or may not be constructed of other ma terial, while it easily lends itself to decorative purposes.

The Earth's Population.

The population of the earth has They have concluded that China has 50,000,000 less than they formerly supposed. There has thus been an actual increase of about 38,000,000 in the population of the globe - an increase, however, which must be spread over ten years, as many of the recent censuses are decountal. For Europe the present population is rated at 327,743,400, showing an the future.

Its head or bow, comparing it to an iron-clad, is armed with a pair of pincers, which, besides being as venomous cers, which, besides being as venomous as the editor of a party organ, can bite the end off an iron safe. Each side is armed with about forty short legs, and each leg is armed with a sting like that of a wasp. The centipede terminates in a pair of hooks, which, like its pin cers, are red hot, so we have been told by an innocent young man who undertook to pick it up by its stem. When a centipede anchors his head in the fleshy anatomy of a human being, throws out his two grappling irons from his rear, and then draws its eight yodd, very odd, claws together, it will bring tears to the heart of an Irish landlord to see how the little yet holds.

the little ret hold? The bite of the centipede rarely causes death, but it makes the bitten party wish he were dead, for a short time, at least, and leaves an ugly sore. The statement that the bite of the centipede does not cause death is hable to correction The centipede is very apt to become a "remains" after it bites a to become a "remains" after it bites a person, as there is quite a prejudice against it. For this reason it is very much seeluded in its labits, living in retirement among the rocks of old buildings. Its diet is believed to be insects that are not as heavily armed and iron-clad. Why the centipede was created in the first place, and what good purpose it serves, are profound mysteries to the ordinary intellect.
